

Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election is a real example of the danger of media consolidation. Sinclair uses the public airways for free and are obligated by law to serve the public trust. When large companies control the airways we get more of what's good for them, the bottom line, and less of what we need for democracy. Their actions show why we need to strengthen media ownership rules, not weaken them. They show why the licensing renewal process needs to involve more than a returned postcard. Thank You. Mary Senseney